12pm - 12:30pm ISTE webinar: Problem-Based Learning: Math Research Assessments

Calendar: ECMECC PD Opportunities

Created by: Jeremy Mikla

Description:

It's time to ditch the math classrooms of yesteryear. Rows of desks, rote memorization and traditional assessments are out and problem-based instruction and problem-based learning is in! Consider upgrading your assessment strategies with a math research assessment. In this session, we'll explore what a math research assessment is, how to introduce it to your students, this type of assessment's impact on academic content knowledge and how to guide students through this process. Presented by Victoria Thompson, education industry executive, Microsoft, and ISTE Community Leader. You can register here to attend live or automatically get the recording emailed to you! ISTE Expert Webinars are exclusively for members and are presented by ISTE authors, ISTE Certified Educators, and ISTE Community Leaders. Each webinar is just 30 minutes so you get practical PD without wasting your time

Description:

About OER Project Skills Clinics OER Project Skills Clinics are collaborative sessions for teachers looking for a deeper dive into a particular skill. Let the learning experts at OER Project guide you through concepts and tools that you'll be ready to use in your classroom right away. Each session will be impactful as a standalone, but we also encourage you to follow the Skills Clinic series throughout the year. The insights from these sessions will build on one another, providing you with a complete and intensive professional development experience! Session 3: Comparison is the Highest Form of Flattery - November 15, 2022, 3 to 4:30 p.m. PT Comparison is a skill that students learn from a very young age, but comparing historical events and processes is far more complicated than comparing apples and oranges. Throughout history and comparison has challenged leaders, complex societies, and individuals. Helping students understand the historical thinking practice of comparison will help them grapple with various historical events. Being able to describe, compare, and contrast events in the same era or across periods is vital to a student's greater understanding of history. Do not miss out on your chance to learn a few techniques for engaging in activities that will support your students' acquisition of this skill. REGISTER >

6pm - 7pm Pedagogy and Practice: Creating Spaces for Native Students

Where: online

Calendar: ECMECC PD Opportunities

Created by: Jeremy Mikla

Description:

It's critical to understand the intricacies of building culturally responsive lessons that meet the needs of Native students. Cost: $125-$175 About this event Pedagogy and Practice dives deeper into what it means to evaluate, design, and teach a curriculum that encourages academic success of Indigenous students. This workshop continues the journey of culturally sustaining work by helping participants build the necessary skills to make a transformative difference in the classroom. The first workshop in this series, "Supporting Native Students" began the journey of supporting Native students in the educational system. Pedagogy and Practice moves the conversation to developing and evaluating curriculum and practice. Join Dr. Chelsea Mead and Megan Heutmaker to learn more about how to evaluate educational materials with a critical lens. Pedagogy and Practice goes further to explore how to design and implement classroom content and create lessons that support Indigenous students. Learning Outcomes:

- Identify best practices in classroom lessons that positively impact Native students.
- Gain knowledge about how to identify problematic materials and teaching practices.
- Learn about pedagogical approaches that speak to Native students in the classroom.
- Understand the best practices of supporting Native student academic success.

Who Should Attend? Teachers, Educators, Curriculum & Instruction Leaders, Administrators, Cultural Liaisons and Directors.

• Note: This workshop is most effective, if you have completed "Supporting Native Students".
